the world's largest independent health information technology company, with $2.2 billion in revenues in 2011 and more than 11,000 associates worldwide. In September 2012, Forbes ranked Cerner 14th on its list of the world's most innovative companies.

Widely respected for his vision and strategic thinking, Patterson has a unique ability to anticipate and articulate how information technology will transform health care. Starting with a single laboratory information system in 1979, by the mid-1980s, Patterson was investing in creating a suite of fully integrated, clinically focused commercial health care applications. Cerner entered the 1990s with a first-of-its-kind application set built on a common platform with real-time interactive decision support. In the mid-1990s, Patterson presciently invested significant resources to rebuild the platform on client-server technology using a person-centric data model.

Continuing through Cerner's third, and now fourth decades, Patterson has led Cerner to invest more than $3 billion in research and development of health IT, and the solutions he once envisioned are valued by more than 2,600 hospitals and 40,000 physicians in private practice.

As a public company, Cerner has outperformed the broader markets since its inception and today is listed on the S&P 500 and NASDAQ-100 indexes. In 2012 and 2010, Forbes named Patterson among the top five in its annual list of "America's Best CEOs," and in May 2012 the magazine featured him and Cerner as its cover story. Patterson has been listed five times as one of Modern Healthcare's "100 Most Powerful People in Healthcare."

Patterson is co-founder and serves on the executive board of the First Hand Foundation, a non-profit foundation that provides financial assistance to children with critical health care needs. Outside of health care, Patterson serves as a Lifetime Director for the 113-year-old American Royal Association, celebrating agrarian lifestyles and values, and he gives time to support the development of other entrepreneurs. He and Cerner co-founder Cliff Illig invest in the Kansas City regional community, including purchasing Kansas City's Major League Soccer team from Lamar Hunt in 2006.

Patterson grew up on his family's farm near Manchester, Oklahoma. He earned a bachelor's degree in finance and master's degree in business administration from Oklahoma State University.
